Sir

In reply to the letter of the Director of the 20th instant inquiring to what extent if any and for how long a period coins in the hands of the Coiner at the close of the calendar year have been delivered as a part of the coinage of the succeeding calendar year. I would say, it has always been the practice covering quite a number of years for the Coiner to deliver perfect Coin made at the close of December, the first delivery in January following. The amount cannot be known because all coins remaining over in Coiners hands are rated bullion in the accounts, such coins

Hon. Daniel M. Fox,
Superintendent,

Sir.

In reply to the letter of the Director of the 20th instant inquiring to what extent if any and for how long a period coins in the hands of the Coiner at the close of the calendar year have been delivered as a part of the Coinage of the succeeding calendar year. I would say, it has always been the practice covering quite a number of years for the Coiner to deliver perfect coin made at the close of December, the first delivery in January following. The amount cannot be known because all coins remaining over in Coiners hands are rated bullion in the accounts, such coins are lights, heavies or standards as may happen. The coinage of one day is delivered the first working day following and the work of adjusting one thousand-dollar drafts cannot be carried on otherwise.

Very Respectfully,
